Student message applauded

THE WA College of Agriculture's school play has taken yet another curtain call, taking out a prize at the Injury Control Council of WA Awards showcase last week.

The college was commended for its innovative approach to promoting injury prevention through the play, which carried a strong message about road crashes, binge drinking and depression. ICCWA chief executive Deborah Costello said the award recognised excellence in injury prevention initiatives.

"The WA College of Agriculture Narrogin has been commended for the innovative and novel approach they used to educate students about community safety," she said.

The play, the story of Tom Brennan, was performed at Narrogin Town Hall to more than 300 people in August.

More than 20 students, and almost half the Year 12 class, were involved in the play in some way.

With performers from all over the region, the show enjoyed support from the school, Healthway and Roadwise, the Town of Narrogin and Narrogin Auto Wreckers.
